Dutton Absorbs Pi Press

Pi Press, launched as a trade imprint by Pearson Education in 2003 focusing on popular science, has been taken over by Penguin where its hardcover list will become part of Dutton and trade paperback's will be released by Plume. Founding Pi editor Stephen Morrow has joined Dutton as executive editor along with associate editor Jeff Galas.

Dutton president Brian Tart said Dutton/Plume will publish all titles under contract with Pi through either the Dutton or Plume imprints. The Pi Press imprint name will not be retained, although Morrow and Galas will continue to acquire titles in the popular science line. "It will add some different things to our list," Tart said of the Pi title additions. Tart noted that even though the Pi line was sold by the Pearson sales force, most of its sales were through bookstores. "It just made sense to bring it here," he said, where the Penguin sales team will take over sales.

The first book to be published this summer will be This Is Your Brain on Music: The Science of a Human Obsession by Daniel J. Levitin. Second up will be Postcards From Mars: The First Photographer on the Red Planet by Jim Bell. --Jim Milliot
